Beaver County System of Care

It can happen to anyone . . .

Mental illness is a medical condition that affects how a person thinks, feels, acts, or relates to others or their surroundings. Approximately 1 in 5 adults experience mental illness in a given year. Symptoms can range from mild to severe and vary from person to person. In many cases, daily life is hard to handle. But with expert diagnosis and treatment, one can often get life back on track.

5 warning signs that someone is suffering and may need help:

- A Change in Personality
- Uncharacteristic Anxiety, Anger or Moodiness.
- Social Withdrawal and Isolation
- Lack of Self-Care or Risky Behaviors
- A Sense of Hopelessness or Feeling Overwhelmed

(These warning signs, particularly when occurring together, are an indicator that it is time to seek help – for yourself or for others.)
